

The Red-White-Red Card and the Blue Card-EU Criteria-guided immigration of qualified workers

A. Red-white-red card

The red-white-red card is a residence title for third country nationals with certain qualifications. The main requirement is a matching job offer in Austria. The red-white-red card binds the qualified worker to his employer for at least 21 months. After 2 years it is possible to change into the free labour market. 4 different groups of workers are eligible for the red-white-red card:

1. Personnel with particularly high qualification

Persons are considered particularly highly qualified if they achieve at least 70 out of 100 points on a scoring system (see Annex A). These persons may apply for a visa D at the competent Austrian embassy if they can provide evidence of this qualification. If this visa D is granted, the person may enter Austria for 6 months to search for employment.

If a person with particularly high qualification finds an occupation appropriate to this qualification, the red-white-red card may be granted.

2. Other key personnel

Persons who achieve at least 55 out of 90 points on a scoring system (see Annex C) may obtain the red-white-red card, as they are considered other key personnel.

Prerequisite is an offer of employment.

Key personnel under the age of 30 have to earn at least € 2.610,00 gross per month, key personnel over 30 at least € 3.132,00. The red-white-red card may be denied if persons with the same qualification who may be placed in this position are registered with the Public Employment Service Austria (AMS).

3. University graduates who studied in Austria

University graduates (bachelor, master or PHD studies) who have found an occupation corresponding to their level of education may be granted the red-white-red card if their monthly gross income amounts to at least € 2.349,00.

4. Personnel for occupations with skilled labour shortage

There is a yearly regulation containing a list of occupations with skilled labour shortage. Persons who achieve at least 55 out of 90 points on a scoring system (see Annex B) and have been trained in one of the listed occupations may obtain the red-white-red card. Prerequisite is an employment in this occupation for a wage in accordance with the Collective Agreement or the remuneration otherwise customary in this sector. ### Blue card – EU

This residence title is granted to persons with at least tertiary qualification after a three years' programme, if they have found an employment appropriate to their education with a monthly gross income of at least € 4.447,00 and if no persons with the same qualification are registered as job-seekers with the Public Employment Service Austria. The blue card – EU will be issued for 2 years and binds the employee to a certain employer. After 2 years it is possible to change to the free labour market if the employee was employed for at least 21 months.

B. Procedural provisions on red-white-red card and blue card -EU:

Applications for a red-white-red card or blue card-EU are filed at the competent Austrian embassy abroad. If a qualified worker is already legally staying in Austria (visa-free residence, visa D for searching work or residence title for university graduates), the application may also be filed in Austria at the competent Immigration, Citizenship and Registry Offices (in Vienna: Municipal Department 35).

Applicant is the qualified worker him-/herself, a written declaration by the future employer has to be attached. The application may also be filed in Austria by the future employer. The procedure may take a maximum period of 8 weeks.

C. Family members

Family members (spouses, minor, unmarried children) receive a “red-white-red card - plus” with free access to the labour market. Family members of workers from group 2,3 and 4 have to prove their knowledge of German of level A1 already at the moment of filing the application (exempt are minors younger than 14 or persons with certain previous knowledge or school-leaving certificates).
